FEATURED SPEAKERS:

TYLER ENSLIN

Remaining Positive in Times of Crisis

Beginning in March of 2020 the word "crisis" took on new meaning for billions of people. For most a global pandemic meant unprecedented challenges in relation to their careers, personal life, finances, relationships, and even physical and mental health. These issues were magnified when restrictions that were expected to last for a few weeks lingered on for over a year. This highly interactive program has been specifically designed to help participants to navigate these unique challenges as well as to reflect on personal lessons learned from the experience. Thus the content has been customized to impact both career and personal aspects of life. Attendees will learn strategies that can help them to control stress levels, build habits to promote growth, and focus on opportunities. As the world collectively works towards a return to "normal," we know that even during relatively good times, stress, challenges, and crises are often a part of life. Therefore although this training is framed through the lens of a global pandemic, we have carefully designed the content to be applicable to virtually any crisis that participants may face in the future.

KAYLEEN McCABE

Safety Isn't Just PPE

While earplugs and the Safety Dance are two of Kayleen's favorite things, in this breakout session we will discuss her third, keeping the whole Craft Professional safe on and off the job site.

Kayleen McCabe's passion for the trades takes her from garages to global summits. A Contractor and industry ambassador, she's a sought-after speaker on trade education, career choices, America's labor shortage – all marked by her trademark playfulness, candor, and informed wit.

The longtime host and guest on construction TV shows, Kayleen is committed to soliciting respect and visibility for Craft Professionals and the careers associated with them.
